
From: Jason L. Abraham [<mailto:jason.abraham@bigpond.com>]

Sent: Monday, 14 September 2015 9:03 PM

To: Policy AGD

Subject: Domestic and Family Violence Act

Justice Judith Kelly has questioned what society has become "if we do not try to help each other", during the sentencing of a man who bashed his wife to death while witnesses watched on.

I say more poignantly, what has the judiciary become when a justice only gives a 14 year sentence for a violent and heinous crime.

My suggestion is that the judiciary has to be legislated to place the victim and the victims right to justice above that of the perpetrator. GET TOUGH ON CRIME!

Regards

Jason L. Abraham